PROFILE

Data journalist with six-plus years writing and producing data-driven stories for non-technical audiences on economics, public finance, climate, health, and governance. I conceive, research, and write pieces end to end, from data sourcing and cleaning to building narratives that honest readers can trust. My work has been recognised with an award for public-interest journalism, covered by the BBC, and featured by the Global Investigative Journalism Network. Beyond commissioned work, I independently produce data content on public finance and economics, driven by a conviction that evidence should be accessible to anyone who wants it. An extensive portfolio of my work is shared here.

EXPERIENCE

Data Journalist and Editor · Odipo Dev / Africa Data Hub · Remote · April 2023 – Present

Serve as both data journalist and content editor for Africa Data Hub, a consortium of four organisations producing high-impact data stories for African public audiences. Conceived, researched, and wrote an award-winning article on the impact of U.S. Government health funding withdrawal on Kenya's health system. Led creation of Kenya's first femicide database, subsequently covered by the BBC and recognised by the Global Investigative Journalism Network.

- Conceive, research, and write data stories as primary author, end to end, from data sourcing and cleaning through to narrative structure and final copy.
- Source and analyse economic, climate, gender, and health data from the World Bank, OECD, UN, IMF, and national statistics bureaus, applying a strong narrative lens to uncover insights and eliminate bias.
- Lead and edit a team of data journalists, enforcing rigorous quality and editorial standards across all published work.
- Write and produce articles and explainer videos in jargon-free language, making complex data accessible to diverse, non-technical audiences.
- Engage and build partnerships with consultants and publishing outlets, both mainstream and niche-serving outlets.
- Produce Vybecast, a data-video channel targeted at younger audiences covering Kenya's public finances, health, and economics.

Multimedia Journalist · Debunk Media · June 2021 – October 2022

- Researched and wrote data-driven video scripts and articles on public debt, inflation, and macroeconomics for a general audience.
- Generated story ideas, pitched content strategy, and produced multimedia pieces including graphics, animations, and social media content, aligned with editorial standards.

Treasury & Cash Accountant · MultiChoice Africa · July 2013 – September 2021

- Built foundations in data entry, data accuracy, and data analysis through monthly financial reporting, payments statistics, and management cash analysis reports.
- Performed bank reconciliations in accordance with accounting standards and curbed revenue leakage through rigorous financial controls and accurate transaction matching.
